

Sarcasm still has it's virtues.

I just applied for a building permit for a new house.

It was going to be 100 ft tall and 400 ft wide with 9 turrets at various heights and windows all over the place and a loud outside entertainment sound system. It would have parking for 200 cars and I was going to paint it snot green with titty pink trim.

The City Council told me to go to hell.

So I sent in the application again with only one change. This time, instead of a house..... I called it a Mosque.

Worker's are scheduled to start on Monday.....
